Where Rotary Peace Center alumni work

Program alumni serve as leaders in government and nongovernment agencies, education and research, United Nations agencies, law enforcement and the military, humanitarian groups, and international organizations.

ElsaMarie D'Silva (India)

Chulalongkorn, 2016

Founder and chief executive
Red Dot Foundation
India

“The Rotary Peace Fellowship program came at a point in my life where I wanted to validate my work. Some of the skills I took back from the fellowship include better communication in the nonviolent space. I feel supported by this community and can reach out to any peace fellow in the world.”

Charlie Allen (Australia)

Chulalongkorn, 2010

Director of partnerships
Institute for Economics and Peace
Australia

“The fellowship opened up my thinking, created new pathways, provided a new set of tools, and most important, opened up a whole new network of people and resources.”

Mwila Chigaga (Zambia)

Duke, 2004-06

Senior regional gender specialist
International Labour Organization
South Africa

“My work is to promote equal rights for women and men in the world of work.”

Abdikheir Ahmed (Somalia)

Queensland, 2011-12

Director
Immigration Partnership
Canada

“We are a family of peace fellows; we see ourselves as change agents in the community. And to be a change agent, you need to be able to influence society and put yourself in the loop of decision-making.”

How to apply

- Visit rotary.org/peace-fellowships to see the eligibility requirements and restrictions. Applications are available in February.
- Research the curriculum and programs at each Rotary Peace Center. Prepare to rank two centers for the master's program and choose one for the certificate program.
- Connect with a local Rotary district to request an interview and endorsement, which are required.
- Use the Club Finder to locate a club near you and engage with Rotary.
- Submit the online application to the district by 15 May. You'll be notified of the Rotary Foundation's decision in November.
- Once selected, master's fellowship finalists must apply separately for university admission.
